INTRODUCTION

When in 1931 the first edition of Volume III of the Topographical Bibliography was published it was possible to cover the whole of the Memphite area in one relatively slim book. This is no longer feasible due to the large number of relevant objects discovered or published in the meantime and also because of the constantly increasing need for widening the range of objects and information. It was therefore decided to publish the second edition of Volume III in two parts with the dividing line south of Abūṣir, and as a result of this Saqqāra and the area south of it as far as Dahshūr will be dealt with in the second part of this volume which is well advanced at the time of writing.

The most important sites included in the first part are, from the north, Abū Rawāsh, Gīza, Zāwyet el-ʿAryan, Abū Ghurāb, and Abūṣir.

Abū Rawāsh is now much better known than it was some forty years ago, and the Raţedef statues particularly are of great interest to the student of the sculpture of Dynasty IV. Montet's and Klasens's excavations of the Early Dynastic cemeteries are major new features of the Abū Rawāsh Necropolis, the former having only been published after the appearance of the first edition of the Topographical Bibliography while the latter took place little more than a decade ago, and Professor Klasens was kind enough to supply some additional information.

Gīza is, of course, the most important single site included in the first part of Volume III. The original division has been retained.

In the Pyramids section the reader will notice that the whole pyramid-complex is dealt with in a uniform way proceeding from east to west. More often than not we overstep the limits as defined by the title of the publication, for example we include references to the dismantled wooden boat of Khufu, but it has been felt that since the philologist and the archaeologist are beginning to work in much closer co-operation than ever before the inclusion of these references is fully justified. We have for the first time assembled all the statues of Khephren and their fragments found by Mariette, Reisner, Junker, Hassan, the von Šieglín Expedition, and others at various places at Gīza. The bibliography of some of the Khephren and Menkaure statues is growing so fast that several times we have been compelled to resort to presenting selected references only. This is a new phenomenon not encountered in the volumes of the first edition. Some objects, chiefly statues, are for reasons not all Egyptological reproduced time and again, primarily in popular publications. Our policy in such cases has been to include all references of Egyptological value and a selection of the others which are suitable for the purpose of study, that is showing the objects from less usual angles or with important details.

The Great Sphinx section was of necessity further divided according to the new monuments found in the surrounding area, the most important among these being the Temple of Ḥaunon-Ḥaremakhet built by Amenophis II and enlarged by Sethos I. Objects found in these small buildings are listed under each monument whenever the connection can be regarded as certain but the bulk of the material, mainly stelae, had to be systematically enumerated at the end of the section. I am grateful to Dr. H. Ricke for permission to consult his material on the Sphinx Temple before publication.

By far the most complex section is that dealing with the Gīza Necropolis. The scheme used in the first edition has proved remarkably resilient and has been basically retained here although some terminological changes have been introduced. The whole Necropolis is divided into larger areas geographically well defined. The West and East Fields are respectively situated west and east of the Pyramid of Khufu. The Central Field covers the old quarry area between the Pyramid of Khephren and the Great Sphinx and with the exception of some later tombs is delimited by the Causeway of Khephren in the north while the as yet little explored South Field is found on higher ground at the southernmost limit of the Giza Necropolis, at some distance south of the Valley Temples of Menkaure and Khephren. To these four Fields a further three smaller Cemeteries have been added and are treated as being on a par with them, Cemetery G I S south of the Pyramid of Khufu, the Quarry Cemetery west of the Pyramid of Khephren, and the small Menkaure Cemetery. The first two might well be regarded as offshoots of the East and Central Fields but on account of their rather isolated position it seems appropriate to deal with them as independent parts of the Necropolis. There is no uniform numbering scheme for the tombs of the Giza Necropolis and so each Field or Cemetery has to be treated on an individual basis. For the West and East Fields Reisner’s system according to which tombs were allotted numbers by their belonging to a cemetery was used. The numbers proceed, generally speaking, from west to east and this also is the direction to which we adhere whenever possible. Tombs without Reisner’s numbers or with numbers of Lepsius, Junker, etc., are incorporated at places where they belong according to this system. The list of contents of the volume at the beginning and the plans and lists of concordances of the tomb-numbers at the end should be of sufficient help in sorting out more difficult problems.

While Reisner’s number system presents a rough skeleton to which one can add the other tombs of the West and East Fields there is nothing comparable for the Central Field. Our plans XX–XXIII have therefore been provided with a grid which should make the task of locating tombs much easier.

Some unpublished material is quoted here for the first time, such as the squeezes of R. T. Lieder (1850–3) in the Griffith Institute, and the papers of Luigi Vassalli (1859–84) which were discovered in Milan through the kind help of Professor Curto and the late Professor Černý. Among other unpublished sources are the Wilkinson squeezes, recently identified by Dr. Moss and Mrs. Burney, and the Grdseloff and Černý MSS.

The task of dealing with the large number of Giza tombs, some of which are not yet completely published, has been facilitated by the help of many colleagues, particularly curators of museums with records or objects from Giza excavations, to whom we turned when in difficulties. It is hardly possible to enumerate everybody who has helped us; to all of them we are most grateful. We must, however, specially mention the late Dr. W. Stevenson Smith of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston who supplied much information from Harvard–Boston excavation records as well as some unpublished plans. We are also indebted to Professor K. Simpson and Mrs. R. Hodnick who have dealt with additional inquiries, Dr. R. Krauspe of Leipzig who very kindly checked notes for us from the Steindorff excavation which remains unpublished, and Dr. H. Kayser of the Pelizaeus-Museum supplied details of some of the objects which are in Hildesheim. Dr. Diya’ Abou-Ghazi has been very helpful in identifying some of the Hassan finds now in the Cairo Museum.

The Pyramid-field of Giza is concluded by a fairly substantial section entitled Miscellaneous: this contains references to objects which are said to have come from Giza but without specifying the exact circumstances of the find.

The section dealing with the Sun-temple of Neuserrê at Abû Ghurâb has undergone considerable changes compared with the first edition. We have tried to find the present location of all important relief-fragments from the Temple and here Dr. S. Wenig of the Staatliche Museen in Berlin has rendered invaluable help. We are also most grateful to him for enabling us to quote his and Professor Edel's forthcoming book on the Weltkammer reliefs.
INTRODUCTION

The only important excavation carried out at Abūsir in recent years has been that of the late Professor Žaba in the mastaba of Ptahshepses who kindly gave me permission to publish here for the first time the plan of the complete mastaba, and it was thanks to his generosity that I was invited to take part in the 1970 campaign which enabled me to verify some unpublished material at various Memphite sites as well as in the Cairo Museum.

I am very grateful to all who have taken part in the preparation of this book. Helen Murray and Vivien Raisman have done most of the work on indexing the volume and keeping our records in the Griffith Institute up to date; their share by far surpasses a brief mention in this Introduction. To Mrs. Cox I must extend my thanks for her usual competence and the exactitude with which she has drawn the plans, and also to Mrs. Yeaxlee and Mrs. Hine who coped so successfully with the typing of the manuscript. The staff of the Ashmolean Museum library had to deal with the innumerable books which we have consulted in the course of the work. To the Oxford University Press are due my thanks for the professional skill with which they tackled the complicated printing problems.

The late Professor Jaroslav Černý discussed with me many of the constantly occurring problems and his advice and readiness to help are sorely missed.

Last but by no means least I want to express my deep gratitude to the now retired editors Dr. Moss and Mrs. Burney. Apart from the fact that all the material they have assembled in the past years has been put at my disposal they have taught me most of the skills required for work on the Topographical Bibliography. I have received constant encouragement from them as well as practical help. I cannot wish more than that this publication may live up to the standards set by the previous editors.

NOTE TO READERS

Registers are counted from the top and numbered in Roman figures, heavy type; scenes in registers are described starting with the one nearest to the large figure of deceased unless otherwise stated.

Destroyed scenes or details are indicated by square brackets.

Numbers in round brackets at the beginning of a paragraph refer to position on plans.

When authors are quoted without the title of the book, the full reference will be found at the beginning of the section.

Original copies and publications only are usually included, though secondary ones are given in special cases. For some very extensively published objects, scenes, or views, only selected references are given (indicated by footnotes); however, all important publications have been included.

Tombs shown in heavier outline on the plans of cemeteries are those mentioned in the letterpress.
